Interview with Tove-Heidi Mortensen, student counsellor

Tove-Heidi was positive to the project presented. Student counsellor would use it often since they help students with planning their studies. Some students need help when they plan to study abroad, changes university or missed courses for various reasons. Today when they plan the individual course order they sit down and fill in a template on a paper. This could be more efficient with a drag-and-drop feature in the web browser. The feature would look like the template but send a waning if a course is dropped in a place where the students don't have the prerequisites or when the course is not given.

She wanted some way to motivate the students that some courses are important later, her vision was to show lines between the courses. The courses could be sorted with colors to give an overview. Similar to how we pictured it. She also wanted individual login for them and students so that they could make an individual scheme for students and then send them to the students. It should be possible to find courses for programs.